DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

1. The numbering of claims is not in accordance with 37 CFR 1.126 which requires the original numbering of the claims to be preserved throughout the prosecution. When claims are canceled, the remaining claims must not be renumbered. When new claims are presented, they must be numbered consecutively beginning with the number next following the highest numbered claims previously presented (whether entered or not).

Misnumbered claim 7-20 been renumbered 6-19. Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
 2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
 3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
 4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.
4. Claims 1-4, 6-10 and 17-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kitamura et al in view of Harvey et al.

Kitamura et al show electrolytically recovering copper in a cell in which the temperature is maintained at a level not less than 55° C. See col. 5 and 6 in the examples. Electrolyte is introduced and discharged from the cell and the cell shows a recirculation pattern which appears to enable removal of slime from the electrolyte or at least appears to recirculate slime free electrolyte. The electrolysis occurs at high current densities.

Harvey et al. also electrolyze copper at high current density and additionally show a filter which is present to remove slimes by recirculation of the electrolyte to remove fine slimes. This reference shows at least one of the cathode materials. See col. 9, lines 14-15 and lines 30-45.

It would be considered within the skill of the art to substitute the filter arrangement as shown by Kitamura et al by the filter and cathode substance of the Harvey et al reference because the primary reference teaches the accumulation of slimes at the bottom of a recirculation system and the secondary likewise shows such an accumulation, but presents a solution to removal of the finer slime particles which generally are not desirable in copper refining operations.

Allowable Subject Matter

5. Claims 5, 11-16 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

6. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: The references of record do not show or suggest electrolytically refining copper in which the current density is defined to be the relationship $X \text{ A/m}^2$ and the average velocity of the electrolyte passing through the space between the electrodes is defined by the relationship $Y \text{ m/h}$.

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Anzalone III shows refining copper electrolytically.
